THE STANTON STREET CHURCH UNDER DR. RAINSFORD-HIS VIGOROUS ASSISTANT.

The Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford, rector of St. George's stant Episcopal Church, not finding in the care of twenty district parish organisations, a large Sun-day-school, an average of twenty-seven services a k and many extraneous labors sufficient scope for his energies, has recently assumed charge of the Church of the Reformation, in Stanton-st., the building and work having been conveyed by the trustees to St.

origin of the Stanton Street Caurch dates from 1832, when Dr. McVlckar, then a professor in Co-lumbia College, opened a Sunday-school in the neighrhood, and early in the following year held the first church service, the congregation comprising five grown people and a few ragged children. The infant church was named Epiphany from the day on which it was organized. A building lot in Stanton-st. was purchased and a rector called, the Rev. Lot Jones, under whose care the work grew rapidly, notwithling many difficulties, and among those who reeir early training there in church work there are now living a bishop, three clergymen and several inent laymen. After the death of Mr. Jones, in 1865, the congregation and Sunday-school continued although there was no rector till 1868, when the Rev. B. Leacock accepted a call and remained till 1872. After a few years an amalgamation took place with the Church of the Reformation, in Fiftieth-st, which assumed the Stanton Street Church as a mission, and ropped the name of The Epiphany. In the spring of 1884 St. George's Church offered to provide for the Sunday services, the Rev. Lindsay Parker, now rector of St. Peter's, Brooklyn, and the Rev. E. F. Miles officiating through the summer, the latter taking charge as rector in the fall of the same year.

church edifice, with every accommodation for parish organizations, was, through the munificence of Cornelius Vanderbilt and R. Fulton Cutting, begun in 1885 and finished in 1886. The church has a eating capacity of about 800, and the entire building is well equipped for all parish purposes; the lower floors containing a fine Sunday-school room, utilized in the week by the kindergarten, a gymnasium, club rooms and commodious vestries. In April, 1888, Dr. Miles resigned, and soon afterward the trustees decided to give the property and work into the hands of the vestry of St. George's, the mission church and its buildings to be known as St. George' St. George's accepted the responsibility and the Rev. Charles Scadding, second assistant, has been appointed minister-in-charge of the chapel Mr. Scadding comes from Trinity College, Toronto, and began his ministry in the Church of St. John, affalo, coming thence to St. George's in April, 1886. Here he has interested himself particularly in the younger people of the parish. He entered on his Whit Sunday, and Dr. Rainsford, in his sermon on the following Sunday, commended highly the example of self-denial set to the young clergy by his istant's choosing to go and live among his flock, in an unfashionable neighborhood, although the temptation was offered to him of an easy parish in the upper part of the city.

ement, of superior character to the average of their class in St. George's parish. They are independent, and are determined to have their church free in every possible way. Mr. Scadding has already organized among the boys the "Society of the Golden Cord" which he in the first instance begun at St. George's with excellent results. The majority of the members are newsboys, from nine to thirteen, and they are pledged to keep five rules: 1st. To be loving and evable. 2. To be pure in heart, mind and body. 3. To pity and help the poor and weak. 4. To be kind to dumb creatures. 5. To hate the shams, meanness and dishonesty. Having signed this pledge. the boy receives the badge, a knot of golden cord. The Young Men's Club, the Girl's Friendly Society and the Kindergarten are all in active operation. The helping Hand Society, of which Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt is president, is of great value in helping the poorer women in their struggles after a bette and brighter daily life. Mrs. Vanderbilt frequently gives the members various entertainments of a high order. On one occasion lately she engaged Signor Campanini to sing to them. The surplied choir numbers thirty and is under the training of Mr. Ball. The Stanton Street people will share in the benefits of St. George's seaside work during the summer. Mr. Scadding has a small cottage at Rockaway, where he will live for five days in the week, taking down eight of his partisioners every Monday, and bringing them back on Friday. Large excursions will go down frequently for the day. and brighter daily life. Mrs. Vanderbilt frequently

MR. LOWELL ON LITERATURE.

From his speech at the Society of Authors' Dinner

London, July 25.

I am to answer to literature, and I must confess that a person like myself, who first appeared in print fifty years ago, would hardly wish to be answerable for all his own literature not to speak of the literature of other people. (Laughter and "Hear, hear.") But your allusion to sixty years ago reminded me of something which struck me as I looked down these tables. Sixty years ago the two authors you mentioned, Irving and Cooper, were the only two American authors of whom anything was known in Europe, and the knowledge of them in Europe was mainly confined to England. It is true that Bryant's "Water Fowl" had already begun its flight in immortal air, but these were the only two American authors that could be said to be known in England. And what is even more remarkable, they were the only American authors at that time—there were and had been others known to us at home—who were capable of earning their broad by their pens. Another singular change is singested to me as I look down these tables, and that is the singular contrast they afford between the time when Johnson wrote his famous lines about those fills that assail the life of the scholar, and by the scholar he meant the author meant the author-

Toll, envy, want the patron, and the gaol." "Toll, envy, was the parties, and he seem as a singular contrast that I should meet with a body of authors who were able to offer at distinct his stead of begging one disaptive); that is a support of the parties of the seem of the see may have. (Laughter.) I am sure I do not know where we got it. (Laughter.) Do you? (Laughter.) I also sympathice wost heartily with what has been said by the chairman with regard to the increasing love for England among my countrymen. Cheers.) I find on inquiry that they stop longer and in greater numbers every year in the old home, and feel more deeply its manifold charms. They also are beginning to feel that London is the centre of the races that speak English, very much in the sense that Rome was the centre of the ancient world. (Cheers.) And I confess that I love, without thinking of that palace which David built, sitting in hearing of a hundred streams—streams of thought, of intelligence, of activity. And one other thing about London, If I may be allowed to refer to myself, impresses me beyond any other sound I have ever heard, and that is the low, unceasing roar that one hears always in the air. It is not a mere accident like the tempest or the cataract, but it is impressive because it always indicates human will and impulse and conscious movement, and I confess that when I hear it I almost feel that I were listening to the roaring loom of time.
